

Twenty-Third Sunday in Ordinary Time
September 4, 2016

Reflection on the Scriptures

"If anyone comes to me without hating his father and mother, his wife and his children, his brothers and sisters, indeed his very self, he cannot be My disciple." —Luke 14:26, (Presentation Ministries translation)

A traditional hymn begins: "Jesus, my Lord, my God, my All, how can I love Thee as I ought?" We love Jesus as we ought by loving Him with all our hearts, all our souls, all our minds, and all our strength (Luke 10:27). When we give our "all" to Jesus, our relationship with Him is in a class by itself (see Luke 14:26). When we love Jesus as we ought, we die to ourselves and take up our crosses daily (Luke 14:27; 9:23). When we make Jesus our Lord, God, and All, we renounce all our possessions (Luke 14:33). We are owned by God (see 1 Corinthians 6:19-20), and everything we supposedly own belongs to Him.

To love Jesus as He ought to be loved seems to be extreme, and it is. Nevertheless, Jesus loved us to the extremities of the cross. Consequently, to love Him rightly means to give Him nothing less than everything. To give all to Jesus is the most and the least that we can do. He alone died on the cross for love of each of us. He is God. He must be loved accordingly. By grace, we can love Him as He ought to be loved. Love Him Who is Love (1 John 4:16).
